Not
Pinterest-ed
Faith

How do we do this in ministry?

What does it look like to invite the people we lead - our fellow staff, our families in our churches - into REAL LIFE together?

How do we lead with strength and focus, but also with vulnerability and transparency that invites the people around us into REAL COMMUNITY?

Do our people feel like they BELONG?

How do we become "wounded healers?"

How do we walk along our folks "in the trenches" as well as "in the shiny?"

What is something in your life that you feel disqualifies you that may actually QUALIFY you?

Is it possible to bring this personal experience into your ministry?

How do we equip our people with a "life is hard" messy, resilient faith?

How do we help people to understand that GOD IS WITH THEM...even in the hard?

Shifting to our own personal faith journeys...

Are you creating time to rest, listen, explore, lean into God and your own personal faith? When? What does that look like?

What would a healthy schedule look like for you (in order to give yourself time and space) to RECEIVE?

Is there someone you respect and admire that you could ask about his/her rhythms, schedule etc.? No need to recreate the wheel!

OVERFLOW
vs.
Producing/Hustling